

The last year has been an excellent year of laying the groundwork for Surge's future. We now understand more about our technical situation than ever, and we have identified and begun rooting out deep-seated problems.

Should I be reelected, I will continue developing Surge, with a renewed focus on engagement, development and ease of use for our members. As well as stripping the bloat from management by redefining committee positions and finalising the ongoing streamlining of the tech setup to make Surge on the whole less of a black box, and more accessible.
