AOB – keepin' it short and sweet (good luck me)

First of all, soz I can't make it but I've missed too much placement for meetings and it's my first week of Primary Medical Care. Lemme know any super cool updates and I'll try and call in for an hour.

So, we've made some crackin' strides towards bringing sexual consent workshops/lectures into the medicine intro week in 1st year thanks to work from a bunch of people including the wonderful Sarah Eames and working with SCA society. Really excited for how keen the faculty have been so far and so it might be coming your way soon enough.

We finally got our front doors fixed after about 2 years (hooray!).

Managed to get wifi provided at QA hospital for placement students. Although we are now struggling with the wifi at UHS because the NHS has made it easier to access for patients and visitors (it now doesn't time out). Also should be getting wifi covering the blackspot of our office in UHS... <3

Now going to be having an extra SSLC in September as our new year reps will have started by then and a lot of stuff happens in the first couple months of placement (merci beaucoup Samuel).

Had some very productive discussions with the sabbs and how communication and future working could be improved. Very grateful that. Also had some decent discussions with faculty about all the silly admin I shouldn't be doing hmm... But now I should stop moaning yaas

Had a sick birthday this weekend xoxo

Graduation groupings all sorted so I'm a happy bunny.

Bunch of other boring stuff but I'm boring myself now so will update with how my very extra special meetings go this week...

Peace, love and good vibes to all.
